CAROL PRUSA

Recent work on astrophysics and women who “mapped the heavens,” precipitated by my euphoric and disorienting experience witnessing the 2017 total solar eclipse, has led me to research dark energy, continuing a body of work residing in the uneasy thin space between what we do and don’t yet know and the erotic dark energy threading us all, echoes from billions of years ago. This work distills disquieting possibilities brought to mind by recent observations of the Higgs boson—the metastable “God” particle in physics that might instantaneously blip us out of existence (and, eruptive events: political, viral and environmental) that fill my mind with dread, with the strange beauty of being alive. Cancelled exhibitions and artist residency due to the virus opened time to create a fluid, six-panel drawing, Spooky Action, just sent to Taipei, Taiwan, that seeks to fathom the governing principles of the universe through the wave function equation. Boca Raton, FL, Summer 2020.
